UNIVERSITY OF WYOMING

THE IMPACT

on the university

What has the University of Wyoming Endowment Challenge Program meant to UW? Simply put, Wyoming's university would not be where it is today without the support of the State and its Legislature. It would not have stunning, state-of-the-art facilities. Students, especially those most in need, would have a much harder time finding enough support to attend, even with the unprecedented Hathaway Scholarship program. Our student-athletes would not be as competitive. Research would be stunted by lack of funds and facilities. All of these challenges were overcome because Wyoming's elected officials stepped up and supported UW's first priority—its students and the state's future leaders.

This remarkably successful program was established in 2001 by the State of Wyoming to provide additional support to the University of Wyoming by encouraging private donations. It was additionally funded by the Wyoming Legislature through the 2010 session. During this nine-year period, state funds were used, with UW Board of Trustees approval, to match privately funded endowment gifts (of $50,000 or more) and facility gifts for special university building projects (of $25,000 or more).

An incredible 580 endowments and at least 18 facilities have been created or assisted by the program, which has supported or will support UW's students, faculty, programs, and facilities with over $143 million in endowment and facilities matches.

on students

“The Kuehne Foundation Scholarship allowed my wife and me to continue our education at UW while raising our daughter. The English faculty at UW have become our second family and I am grateful for their wisdom and kindness. I would like to thank Dr. Bob Torry in particular. He is my dear friend, advisor, mentor, and my daughter’s godfather. Bob, thank you for everything.

AARON GRAHAM
Graduate student in English

For his master’s program, Aaron Graham is studying T.S. Eliot, Kierkegaardian Existentialism, and theories of cultural trauma, and his thesis will examine mythic representations of cultural trauma in “The Waste Land.” He received the state-matched Kuehne Foundation Scholarship, which is awarded to Wyoming residents who are disabled veterans. Aaron grew up in Glenrock and after attending Sheridan, Northwest, and Casper colleges received his bachelor’s with honors from UW in English. His education was interrupted by a 3 1/2-year tour in the Marine Corps, where he served as an Arabic linguist. He was the 2005 NCAA National Champion in Extemporaneous Speaking and is a published poet and literary critic. He and his wife Thea, who studies psychology at UW, spend most of their time fighting for control of their computers with their two-year-old daughter Alexi.

on faculty

“The state’s matching funds with support from Robert and Carol Berry have placed us at the forefront of biodiversity research, education, and outreach. With the Biodiversity Institute, UW can offer a new global model for the understanding and management of our unique living natural heritage.”

CARLOS MARTINEZ DEL RIO
Professor and Director of UW’s Biodiversity Institute

The University of Wyoming is recognized nationally and internationally for its contributions to biodiversity research, education, and outreach in ecology, environmental sciences, natural resources, and environmental and resource economics. UW’s Biodiversity Institute opens the opportunity to build on our considerable existing assets in faculty, academic programs, and facilities to reach new levels of integration and distinction. Made possible through the state matching program, the Biodiversity Institute will be located in the Robert and Carol Berry Biodiversity Conservation Center. The director of the institute is Professor Carlos Martinez del Rio, who studies functional ecology, or how animal function influences their role in ecological communities.

on facilities

“The State of Wyoming and private sector energy companies have partnered to create an outstanding facility for students and research faculty at the university. The laboratories, collaboration center, and 3-D visualization lab will be unrivaled on campus. Equally important are the partnerships themselves. UW, the state, and industry—working together—will ensure closer alignment between UW’s academic and research outcomes and the state and industry’s needs. We are very excited to commission this facility and get to work.”

MARK NORTHAM
Director of the School of Energy Resources

The School of Energy Resources has a new home—the Energy Innovation Center, a $25.4 million, 30,000-square-foot state-of-the-art research and collaboration facility. The facility includes 12,000 square feet of rapidly reconfigurable laboratory space, a collaboration center, a 3D visualization research facility, and a high-tech classroom/auditorium. The facility was funded through private/public partnerships—private gifts doubled through the Legislature’s state matching program. The most significant gift was from Encana Oil & Gas USA, with BP America, Shell, Peabody Energy, Arch Coal, Anadarko, Marathon, Ultra Petroleum, Questar, and ConocoPhillips also supporting the project. The facility will help ensure Wyoming’s position as a global leader in building the nation’s secure and sustainable energy future.
