

STEP 1101 - TRANSFER FYS: TRANSITIONS THROUGH LIFE

A brand new FYS course designed for transfer students ...

This course fulfills your USP general education FYS requirement. It is intended for transfer students with fewer than 30 post-high school credit hours.

Semester: Fall 2018

Day/Time: Tuesdays & Thursdays 2:45-4:00pm

Location: Coe Library 121

Instructor: Blake Johnson

Section Info: STEP 1101-35; CRN: 16550

Course Description: Transitions are a certainty in life. From childhood to adolescence, high school to college, dependence to autonomy, school to the world of work, singleness to relationship, career to retirement - all of us experience profound transitions at different life stages. Knowing how to learn from prior experiences and anticipate future changes is essential to defining and pursuing success in adulthood. Through readings, guided discussions, and an individual research project, students in this course will explore how life transitions affect things like identity development, goal setting, motivation, and meaning making. As a class, we will also work to understand how current college experiences affect future decision making and career success.
