This program is a daily, weekday event where families and kids of all ages come to our historic building in one of Laramie's most beautiful parks to enjoy delicious hot meals featuring local foods and produce they help grow and harvest. Gardens for Health & Healing

In a unique community-based pilot research project partnership between Feeding Laramie Valley and the University of Wyoming, Gardens for Health & Healing an associate team member will assist with a pilot study in which participants living with multiple chronic health challenges are either provided with a garden and garden mentoring or are randomly chosen to work with FLV to craft their own menu of health and wellness interventions to help them meet their health goals (their intervention could also be gardening, if desired). The study seeks to assess the feasibility and desirability of the design and to understand if and how individual choice impacts physical and emotional health outcomes. A summer associate involved with this project will receive project-specific training and supervision, and will assist the research team with project administrative work, activity preparation and implementation, record-keeping, data collection and participant support.

Help create a change-the-world event in which fair-goers experience the best of regional tradition and ingenuity in one extraordinary September weekend - a weekend for delighting in the beauty, cultures, crafts, art, music, food, animals, agriculture, land, joy and meaningful life in Rocky Mountain country. This annual fair puts a spotlight on sustainable rural living in the six Rocky Mountain states of Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming and the Native First Nations of the region. Summer workers for the Higher Ground Fair will help with all aspects of fair development, building and promotion, will receive free tickets to the fair, and are invited (but not required) to be part of the fair volunteer staff in September.
