The American Heritage Center (AHC) is the University of Wyoming’s home for historical manuscripts, rare books, and University archives. The AHC collects and shares unique and significant material in all formats, documenting the lives of people, communities, organizations, and landscapes. Strengths include Wyoming and the American West, politics and public policy, ranching and energy, entertainment and popular culture, industry, transportation, and military history. The documents and archives held by AHC serve as raw data for scholarship and heritage work, and support thriving communities of place, identity, and interest in Wyoming and beyond.
In 1945, the American Heritage Center (AHC) was officially established. The AHC is the University of Wyoming’s (UW) repository of manuscripts, rare books, and the UW Archives. Internationally known for its historical collections, the AHC first and foremost serves the students and other citizens of Wyoming.

Not a dusty attic or an exclusive sanctuary, the AHC is a welcoming, lively, place where both experts and novices engage with the original sources of history. Access is free and open to all.

The AHC is acknowledged by students and scholars world-wide as one of the nation’s finest special collections repositories. In 2010 we were presented with the Society of American Archivists’ Distinguished Service Award, the highest honor possible for a U.S. repository.

Our holdings, which make us one of the nation’s largest non-governmental archives, encompass nearly 100,000 cubic feet and include:

- More than 4000 manuscript collections
- More than 1 million photographs
- 12000 sound recordings
- 15,000 films
- 65,000 rare books

“During the last two years, the staff have done their utmost to keep the AHC moving ahead smoothly—a job which they did extremely well.”
Our Mission:
To preserve a clearly defined set of primary sources and rare books—reflecting the written, image, and audio history of Wyoming, the Rocky Mountain Region, and select aspects of the American past—and to make those sources accessible to all. Our diverse collections support casual inquiry and international scholarship: most importantly, we play an active and creative role in the teaching and research missions of the University.

AHC Collections:
AHC collections go beyond Wyoming’s or the region’s borders and support a wide range of research and teaching activities in the humanities, sciences, arts, business, and education. Major areas of collecting include Wyoming and the American West, the mining and petroleum industries, environment and natural resources, journalism, military history, transportation (particularly railroads), the history of books, and 20th century entertainment such as popular music, radio, television, and film.

AHC Departments and Programs:
The best known activity at the Center is research by students, scholars, and the public in our reading room where our acclaimed reference staff provides access to the AHC collections, including the Toppan Library’s rare books, to newcomers and experienced researchers alike. The AHC also maintains an award-winning Website, and sponsors a wide range of public and scholarly programs, including lectures, symposia, and exhibits.

ARCHIVES REFERENCE SERVICES
The Owen Wister Western Writers Reading Room is open to all: UW faculty, students and staff, as well as visiting scholars, high school and community students, and members of the public on an equal basis. Reference also provides long distance service, replying to requests via correspondence, phone, e-mail and Zoom. More than 5,000 patrons per year are served, making the AHC one of the most actively used university repositories in the nation. The reference staff also offers bibliographic instruction upon request to assist patrons—from entire UW classes to individuals—in the use of the collections.

Jerry Palen’s passion has always been art, and in 1973 he acted on that passion by submitting ten cartoons to the editor of Western Horseman Magazine. The editor was impressed and paid Palen $5.00 for all ten cartoons. When asked what the series would be called Palen’s response was “Stampede” although, as he’s stated in interviews, he had no idea where the name came from.

During the course of its 43 year run Stampede became the largest weekly syndicated cartoon feature in the agriculture sector of both the United States and Canada, reaching a weekly audience of more than 2 million readers via newspapers and magazines, as well as books of collected works, and a yearly calendar.

Palen’s characters were relatable to rural communities, and he received his inspirations from listening to the people he met in those communities. The series’ central characters, Flo and Elmo, were your average agricultural couple, and the strip aptly and humorously reflected that viewpoint.

Jerry Palen stopped creating new Stampede cartoons on January 1st, 2015 but the series lives on as newspapers and magazines reprint the past cartoons, as well as the books which collect the series, and the calendar which is still eagerly awaited each year.

In 2020, the original artwork of Jerry Palen’s 43 years of Stampede cartoons were donated to the AHC by the Wagon Hound Land and Livestock Company.

The American Heritage Center contributes to research, teaching, and learning at the University of Wyoming by serving diverse audiences across campus and throughout the state and nation. Sub-divisions of the Reference unis include the reading room/reference requests, audio/visual, born digital, instruction, the Anaconda Collection, and rare books.

"Research Services hosted 92 sessions for on-site classes (reaching more than 1400 students)"

In fiscal year 2020, the Reference Services unit provided public access to pre-scheduled and walk-in researchers Mondays-Fridays and worked with many patrons long distance (primarily by phone and email) thru mid-March, when the Center closed due to Covid-19.

While all our remote/distance services continued, we were unable to accommodate on-site visits the remainder of the fiscal year. While Covid-19 restrictions prevented many of our archivist colleagues from entering their buildings to access collections, AHC staff remained able to work on-site. That allowed us to serve our researchers remotely, digitizing select content for our patrons and work with collections. The reference unit also launched new projects to assist the AHC update our online finding aids into new formats, scan small collections for class use for later posting online, and develop new digital exhibits, in addition to our on-going work with patrons long distance.

We helped more than 3200 individuals use the AHC’s collections to conduct research, for coursework, to investigate family or community histories, or to create published scholarship.

Many researchers entered the reading room with a set of collections in mind and found that their conversations with knowledgeable archivists led them to additional resources to support their work. An even larger audience was reached through the online offerings on the AHC’s website.

In addition, Research Services hosted 92 sessions for on-site classes (reaching more than 1400 students) across the curriculum, prior to the Covid closure. Classes from Wyoming’s community colleges and middle school students participating in Wyoming History Day were also welcomed to the Center, in addition to local Laramie organizations. The Reference unit hosted 72 UW classes including 18 from the UW Honors College, plus multiple First Year Seminars, and classes in the departments of History, Teaching with Technology, English, American Studies, Museum Studies, and Women’s Studies, among others.

As the fiscal year ended, the Reference unit was actively developing new ways to expand our virtual and remote service in this Covid-research world. We look forward to continuing our work with patrons in new, expanded ways, in the future.
Digital donations are growing rapidly in this increasingly virtual world, and the Born Digital unit is eager to take on this exciting challenge to support the research mission of the university and the AHC. During the FY 2019-2020 year, over 50% of all donations had some born digital element. More than 1.1 terabytes of unique records, made up of 154,000 files across 53 collections, were ingested by the digital archives team.

This growth is only expected to continue. To be prepared, the Born Digital unit completed an initiative proposal. The proposal strategically sets targets, offers recommendations for enhancing capabilities, and identifies projects to keep it at the forefront of trends. The year, the unit launched projects to increase networked access of digital records to the UW campus community, advance the current website capturing program, and strengthen long-term storage security.

With the unexpected disruptions from the COVID-19 pandemic, many plans were put on pause. However, new opportunities knocked. Digital Archivist Rachel Gattermeyer and University Archivist Sara Davis developed and launched the COVID-19 Collection Project. This project gathers together the experiences of Wyomingites and the UW community so that future researchers can truly see the impact that the coronavirus had on Wyoming. The responses to this project – including photos, oral histories, guided survey responses, and poetry – showcase a broad scope and depth of personal stories about living through the pandemic.

Born Digital was also involved in smaller collaborative projects this past year. The unit worked with the Shell 3D Visualization Center to make a 3D copy of a triceratops foam model (part of the Samuel Peeples collection) that was used in the 1933 King Kong stop-motion film. Born Digital partnered with the Ellbogen Center for Teaching and Learning on the digital literacy portion of the ECTL Certification and Badge Program, which provides educational opportunities for instructors to build their teaching and pedagogy skills. The unit also gave guest lectures to college and high school students about digital libraries and archives.

The UW Archives and the AHC have made great strides to increase access and discoverability for our donors and patrons through a variety of projects. The University Archivist has expanded on its efforts to collect UW history by including more UW units in its web captures project. This ongoing project involves recording, or “capturing”, the content of a UW unit’s web page on a periodic basis. These web captures are then made accessible through their corresponding UW unit finding aid. Additionally, the AHC has implemented a pilot project to allow a UW donor unit direct access to its own born digital archived materials. This pilot project is targeting three collections to test out the new service. With the pilot results, as well as donor provided feedback we plan on expanding and improving the program over the next few years. Our pilot project participants include the College of Arts and Sciences, UW Extension, and UW American Studies Program for the Wyoming Folklife Collection.

The UW Archives participates in outreach to help spread the word about the resources freely available to the public. Most recently, two of our student employees created and published on Virmuze two digital exhibits, one featuring the UW Black 14, and the other featuring former UW professor S.H. Knight. In February 2020, the AHC collaborated with the UW Black Student Alliance to feature historical records of Black Wyomingites (or Black residents of Wyoming) at an exhibit table in the Wyoming Union. We collaborated with the 3-D Visualization Center to create learning experience for a student internship on 3-D digital modeling by using the 1933 King Kong movie triceratops armature. The UW Archivist also fosters learning by participating in the Ellobogen Center for Digital Literacy program, supervising internships, and serving as a guest speaker for UW classes and other programming.

The UW Archives is looking forward to the new year and continuing to provide more understanding of our history through collaboration with our community. One of the first steps in understanding the past is to preserve, and provide access to, a full record of the people, the place, the events, and the time. This includes fostering current relationships and building new partnerships within UW and our community as a whole. Conversations have begun and will continue into 2021 that will facilitate the archiving of more aspects of UW history through collaboration with the newly created UW Black Studies Center. Additionally, plans for conducting oral histories with former UW administrator Dennis Dreher, partnering with Dr. George Frison Center to preserve his papers, and building relations with the family of Dr. Glen Rebka in hopes of including his instrumental research into the archives, are in motion. Collecting the records is only part of the equation. The UW Archives continues to enhance our services in the areas of access, discoverability, and outreach.

Despite the vast changes to the operation of the University of Wyoming and globally due to the coronavirus pandemic, the AHC has been able to adapt and make progress towards its goals and to its mission to work collaboratively with our community—the University, employees, alumni, Wyomingites, and national and global partners—-to preserve its history and make the vast array of resources that we collect and protect available to as many as possible. The UW Archives has focused over the last few years on bringing in those records of our beloved University that have been hidden away across campus so that the American Heritage Center, with its high security, environmentally controlled storage areas, and expertise in preservation and access for both physical and digital materials, can serve as a unified access point for a thorough account of University history. This year the UW Archives focused on collection development, documenting the current moment, increasing access and discoverability, and outreach to potential donors and patrons alike. The official records of the University, those created by university departments, colleges, units and affiliates, provide the foundation of the UW Archives and contain original documentation on the policies, procedures, and mission. We have been fortunate to be able to obtain supporting documentation to the official records by working with UW faculty and administration, as well as student and associated organizations. Such documentation provides insight into the decision-making processes of the University, into research and teaching initiatives, and into issues that are important to students and our community as a whole.

Collection development takes time and collaboration between the donors, who are naturally experts in description and arrangement of their own records, and the archivists, who have invaluable knowledge regarding care and access. The UW Archives and AHC are leading an effort to collect stories and reflections related to the coronavirus pandemic and its impact on Wyoming in collaboration with the Wyoming State Archives, Wyoming State Museum, and other Wyoming institutions. This proactive approach to documenting the current moment ensures that this unique time can be remembered by current and future generations. By collecting survey responses, reports, photographs, directives, audiovisual recordings, memorandums, essays, statistics on cases, poetry, and other forms of creative and informational outputs and documentation, we are able to capture and preserve what our community saw, heard, felt and experienced. The AHC has also conducted oral histories with Albany County Library personnel and Laramie business owners, reached out to professors on campus to integrate projects into their curriculum, and started conversations with schools and administrators around the state to develop ways to include the voices of our younger community members. We urge you to participate. Find out more information at https://www.uwyo.edu/ahc/covid-19-collecting.html.

During the 2019-2020 school year, the annual theme was "Breaking Barriers in History." Over 600 students from across the state participated in one of seven regional contests during March 2020. At the end of those competitions, 221 students qualified for the state contest. In March 2020, we transitioned the state contest to be to a virtual format. Despite challenges presented by the presence of COVID-19, many students were still able to participate and share their projects with a team of judges. At the end of the state contest, 51 students qualified for nationals. Thanks to many generous donors and businesses, over $10,000 in scholarships and special awards was earned by students.

In April 2020, the National History Day program made the decision to transition to a virtual format for the national contest, as well. Despite these challenges, teachers, families and students throughout the state expressed their gratitude for continuing the program. Highlights from the national competition include the following:

- Emma Langford, Rebecca Brough and Kameron Brough, Lander High School, finished in the top 20 in the nation for their group documentary, “Wilma Rudolph: The Will to Change Her World and the Race to See Past Racism.” In addition, they earned the senior division award for best project featuring an aspect of African American History.
- Sarah Ornowski, Jackson Hole High School, finished in the top 20 in the nation and earned the outstanding senior division award for our Wyoming affiliate with her website, “Lewis Hine Against Child Labor: Breaking the Barrier of Public Ignorance.”
- Fernanda Costilla, Jackson Hole High School, finished in the top 20 in the nation with her Senior Individual Exhibit, “Dr. Rebecca Lee Crumpler: African American Pioneer in Medicine Shows Significance of Giving Back.”
- Bailey Fitzwater and Ian Engling, Wheatland High School, finished in the top 30 in the nation with their senior individual exhibit, “Exposing the Teapot Dome: The Granddaddy of All Governmental Scandals.”
- Kai Gessler, Jackson Hole Middle School, finished in the top 20 in the nation and earned the outstanding junior division award for the Wyoming affiliate with her website, “Silenced but Not Erased: Barriers Broken and Created by “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell”
- Wyatt Fitzwater and Gabriel Castellanos finished in the top 30 in the nation with their junior group exhibit, “The Miracle of Deliverance: Breaking the Stronghold with Atomic Power.”
- Karely Garcia and Karly Jones finished in the top 30 with their junior group performance, “Viva La Causa! It’s Not about the Grapes, It’s about the People: Breaking Barriers through Boycotts.”

NHD 2020 was a unique experience. Despite the complications of COVID-19, the dedication, hard work and extra time students and teachers devoted to the National History Day program was apparent. Thank you parents, teachers, community members, businesses, judges and volunteers who contribute to the success of the program each year. We hope to see you next year during regional contests in March and/or the state contest, April 18-19, 2021 on the UW campus in Laramie.

NATIONAL HISTORY DAY is a process of discovery and interpretation, an opportunity to develop critical thinking skills and an understanding of the world. It is an educational program designed to engage students in projects as individuals or in groups including original exhibits, documentaries, oral histories, performances for public, private and home schools students in grades 6-12.
COLLECTION

Emily Hakert puling requested collection material from archival storage.
The American Heritage Center’s Collections Management Department encompasses the operations of distinct units (Accessioning, Content Listing, the Photography and Digitization Labs) which carry out a wide range of responsibilities pertaining to the Center’s archival collections. As the facilitator of the legal and physical transfer of collections to the Center, the Accessioning Unit has the privilege of being the first to see new collections as they arrive. After accessioning is complete, the Content Listing Unit rehouses and lists the collections. They then create the online catalog records and finding aids, which promote access and research. Collections are then placed into one of our nine secure and environmentally controlled storage areas or, in the case of digital records, onto multiple servers. New collection locations are then entered into our collection management system, SAGE. Although our storage areas contain over seventeen miles of shelving, SAGE enables us to easily locate any collection and make it quickly available to patrons. Finally, and increasingly important during this time of COVID-19, the Center maintains state-of-the-art digitization capabilities via its Photography and Digitization Labs, as well as Reference Services, which digitize collection material for both preservation and increased access to a larger audience. This is a capability that we’ve been working to rapidly expand over the past year.

This past year’s acquisitions reflect the full range of the American Heritage Center’s collecting interests and come in many formats, from silver nitrate photographs and hand-written diaries to entirely digital collections delivered on computer hard drives. This year, we received 32 new collections and added new material to 127 existing collections, storing over 700 cubic feet and 1007.77 gigabytes of archival material to our holdings.

... we received 32 new collections and added new material to 127 existing collections, storing over 700 cubic feet and 1007.77 gigabytes of archival material to our holdings.

The National Archives of the United States defines Accessioning as “The process of transferring physical and legal custody of permanent records.” However, that simplistic definition belies the complexity of one of the most important functions of archival care and handling. The act of accessioning a collection creates a fundamental body of information which informs and guides all subsequent actions concerning the collection. This information includes, but is not limited to, the history of the collection, who donated the collection and any restrictions of use, information about how the collection is organized, what types of material it contains, if material may be separated from the collection during processing and what to do with it if it is.

Since we collect on a national basis, the AHC often accepts collections sight unseen. This has led to the development of an extraordinarily sophisticated and effective Accessioning Unit which oversees all incoming archival collection material, whether it be physical or digital. Additionally, since many of the Center’s donors send material over a long period of time rather than all at once, our Accessioning Unit is often the primary contact for our donors when they have questions regarding the status of their collections or wish to send new material.

While other departments and units within the AHC handle and care for the collections during relatively short periods of time (digitization, processing, reference services, etc.), the Accessioning Unit, from first arrival to long-term storage, is ultimately responsible for the collections 24/7/365. While digital storage is overseen by the AHC’s Digital Archivist, the over seventeen miles of shelving in the physical storage areas is managed by the Accessioning Unit.

Accessioning not only shelves the material and enters data into the collection management system, but also monitors the environmental conditions, regulating access, ensures that the areas are maintained, and addresses or reports any mechanical problems.

In summation, accessioning is the bedrock upon which all archival practices rest. Its importance can be understated, but it should never be ignored.

FELLOWSHIPS, GRANTS AND TRAVEL AWARDS

Seventeen researchers from the USA and two foreign connected with the American Heritage Center and advanced their studies as a result of grants from the Center. The AHC recently awarded its 2020 travel grants to scholars exploring topics ranging from the history of jazz to Devils Tower National Monument. “It’s a diverse group with a broad range of interests. Our funding helps them do their work, and the AHC and University of Wyoming community are enriched by a stream of visiting scholars who bring their enthusiasm and expertise to our collections and campus,” says Ginny Kilander, reference services manager of the AHC. “Our travel grant researchers become AHC alumni ambassadors when they head home, forming an international community of advocates for our collections.”

TRAVEL GRANTS

Travel Grants are awarded to recipients to carry out research using AHC’s resource material. Recipients are awarded up to $750 each to support travel and lodging costs. The grants are awarded annually, with funding from permanent endowments associated with UW’s world-class repository of manuscript collections, rare books and university archives. For more information about grants offered by the AHC, visit www.uwyo.edu/ahc/grants/.

2020 Awardees are.

Jonathan Alexink from Winnipeg, Manitoba Canada. His grant will aid in developing a reference guide on history of jazz as influenced by and developed from popular dance bands and orchestras.

Neal Allen from Wichita, Kansas. Allen is researching citizen opinion in constituent letters in congressional papers regarding the Omnibus Gun Control Act of 1968.

Kerri Clement from Livingston, MT. Studying the interaction of Brucella bacteria and indigenous people in western borderlands in 20th/21st centuries. Reliance on Brucella by indigenous people as tool against settler colonialism.

Tim Gresham is working with the National Live Stock and Meat Board Records to study the restructuring of the livestock industry in the American West from 1914-1933. In particular, he is interested in why the big producers cooperated with the big packers and how this relationship changed the meat and livestock industry.

Leah Henderson from Macedon, Victoria Australia. Researching temporal perspectives/reality of time in popular serials and changes due to tech advances. Marvel’s Avengers films are a case study, especially when Lee and Kirby began narrating multi-verses and time travel and how it developed into popular concept with audiences.

Kay Kuhlman from Ruidoso, NM. She will be adding to her scholarly research for her one-woman history-based performance of “The Governor Lady: Nellie Tayloe Ross Returns from History.”

Peter Kunze from St. Petersburg, FL. Peter is doing an examination of the period when Walt Disney Productions hired songwriter to help reinvent Disney Animation after a period of creative stagnancy. Disney storytelling was reinvented by through the integrated musical. He’ll examine contributions of songwriters to Disney films, especially their animated films prior to the 1980s.

Monica Mohseni from Austin, TX. She will study social initiatives and cultural production of Standard Oil New Jersey’s public relations in Latin America, alongside the company’s impact on Latin America’s intellectual discourse, imaginative fiction, and visual cultures.

Sean Scally from Bowling Green, OH. Analyzing links between masculinity and eugenics in the U.S. in early 20th century, particularly military fitness and responses to venereal disease among WWI enlisted men. This involves analysis of Committee on Training Camp Activities and Sanitary Corps efforts to redress issues related to men’s military fitness before/during WWI.

John Walsh from Bloomington, IN. He is studying 1970s comics “prozines” (zine-like publications published by the major comic book publishers) and is conducting a content analysis of prozines with a focus on reader-contributed content and different forms of reader engagement.

Daniel Zizzamia from Richmond, VA. Create a Historic Resource Study (HRS) to provide guidance for the preservation of cultural resources at Devils Tower Nati Monument. The HRS will be a multi-chapter narrative history.

BERNARD L. MAJEWSKI RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

Oleski Navarro from Santa Fe, NM. How the geological distribution of oil deposits and the extraction of oil affected NW Venezuela communities. Examines the abuse of natural resources and the narratives arising around communities marginalized by mineral wealth.

ALAN K. SIMPSON FELLOWSHIP

Ryan Tate from Chicago, IL. Growth of coal development in WY’s Powder River Basin, the inherent localization of multinational energy conglomerates, the changes surface mining brought to energy workers, local society, and the environment, and how coal companies embedded themselves in communities despite early resistance.

Gabriel Raeburn from Philadelphia, PA. The Prosperity Gospel (material wealth as God’s blessing) and its impact on modern American politics from the Great Depression until end of the 20th century.

WOMEN IN PUBLIC LIFE FELLOWSHIP

Brian Sarginger from College Park, MD. Shareholder activism and the key role people like Wilma Soss played in shaping the struggle for shareholder rights in the 20th century.

GEORGE A. RENTSCHLER FELLOWSHIP

Rachel Sailor from Laramie, WY. Photographic style of pictorialism in the American West from 1900 to 1950. She addresses the West’s relationship with eastern centers of art, diversity of western practitioners, and the style’s demise due to the modernism of Group.

UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH AWARD

Ben Nathan from the University of Wyoming. Making research-based artwork from journals found in the AHC’s collections. Nathan drew upon personal journals in the Edith K.O. Clark and G.L. Luhn collections.

Newly Accessible COLLECTIONS

Description equals access; the American Heritage Center made discovery of distinctive collections possible by organizing and describing collections varying in size from a single box to hundreds of boxes and digital files. AHC archivists in the Processing unit processed 79 collections totaling over 500 linear feet and 952 gigabytes of digital content. These collections were processed this year:

Clyde T. Alford scrapbook, 1945-1952
Collection Number 12739
Clyde T. Alford worked for the Union Pacific Railroad in Colorado and Wyoming in the early and mid-20th century. This collection contains photographs and newspaper clippings related to Alford’s time with the Union Pacific from 1945-1952.
.38 cubic ft. (1 box)

Frederick Morrison Babcock papers, 1913-1984
Collection Number 8586
Manuscripts and publications of Frederick Morrison Babcock, a real estate consultant and appraiser, also an administrator at the Federal Housing Administration, who worked from the 1920s to the 1970s.
28.10 cubic feet (29 boxes)

Bill Barnhart papers, 1906-1998
Collection Number 12742
Bill Barnhart was an historian who worked for the Cheyenne State Museum and the Wyoming Recreation Commission. He was also the author of “The Northfork Trail.” This collection contains photographic prints and negatives, artifacts, articles, and color slides of Barnhart’s travels in and around Wyoming documenting historic sites.
.7 cubic ft. (3 boxes)

Joan Bassett papers regarding 111 Grand Avenue, Laramie, Wyoming, 1920-1990

Thank you to all who supported the University of Wyoming’s American Heritage Center through financial gifts and the donation of collections this year. As is fitting for an institution that serves local, regional and global communities, both our gifts in kind and our monetary donations came from individuals throughout the state of Wyoming, the nation, and even overseas. Gifts to the Center support the continued excellence of our core activities, and also allow us to expand our efforts to meet the evolving needs and expectations of students and scholars. This year we used gift funds across all areas of our operations: to employ students and interns, support travel for visiting scholars, purchase significant paintings, curate a major exhibit, sponsor Wyoming History Day, and process collections in entertainment, public policy, and the West.

Over the past fiscal year, 264 donors contributed $69,108 to the Center’s unrestricted fund, with an additional $2,489,698 in major gifts targeted to specific activities. These expressions of support for the American Heritage Center ranged from monthly transfers of $5.00 to major gifts of over $25,000, and we are grateful for each and every contribution.

History and Civics Education plays key role in AHC’s mission to engage the State of Wyoming. Working collaboratively, the Center, the Wyoming History Day program, and the Wyoming We the People program serve Wyoming’s K-12 students and teachers as they encounter history and learn to utilize primary sources. These funds, among others, allow this meaningful work to go on.

Our donors ensure that the work of the American Heritage Center will be innovative and expansive. Current fundraising priorities include increasing capacity for digitization, the launch of a robust exhibits program, increasing our ability to deliver programming around the state, preserving the heritage of University of Wyoming athletics through film preservation activities, and building acquisitions funds to ensure that the AHC is competitive when expensive and essential manuscripts, rare books, and photographs come to market. We appreciate your support.
The faculty and staff of the American Heritage Center serve in leadership and participatory roles in many professional and scholarly organizations:

When Clara Toppan donated the funds to create the Toppan Rare Books Library, her original intent was that it be an open, public space. As the library grew over the years with gifts and purchases, the new acquisitions took pride of place, remaining in the second floor "Toppan Library" rather than being stored in the secure book vault. This increasingly cramped space gradually become inaccessible to the public. And, despite housing some of the Toppan’s prized items, the area lacked archival grade fire suppression.

In response to this situation, the Center decided to enhance the books’ protection and to renovate the Toppan space. With the concurrence of the Toppan family, the AHC launched a major construction project. It began with the removal of the books from the second floor—about ten percent of the Toppan holdings—and placing them in the book vault.

Once the new fire suppression system was installed, known as a dry pipe system, the space was divided into two areas by a new wall. The larger space retains the designation of the Toppan Library and will house a series of public exhibits featuring the "Treasures of the Toppan."
