GUIDE TO THE PAPERS OF AUTHORS
AMERICAN HERITAGE CENTER, UNIVERSITY OF WYOMING

Introduction

The American Heritage Center (AHC) is the University of Wyoming's (UW) repository for historical manuscripts, rare books, and university archives. Internationally known for its historical collections, the AHC first and foremost serves the students and citizens of Wyoming. The AHC sponsors a wide range of scholarly and popular programs including lectures, symposia, and exhibits. A place where both experts and novices engage with the original sources of history, access to the AHC is free and open to all.

Collections at the AHC go beyond both the borders of Wyoming and the region, and support a wide range of research and teachings activities in the humanities, sciences, arts, business, and education. Major areas of collecting include Wyoming and the American West, the mining and petroleum industries, environment and natural resources, journalism, military history, transportation, the history of books, and 20th century entertainment such as popular music, radio, television, and film. The total archival holdings of the AHC are roughly 75,000 cubic feet (the equivalent of 18 miles) of material. The Toppan Rare Books Library holds more than 60,000 items from medieval illuminated manuscripts to the 21st century. Subject strengths include the American West, British and American literature, early exploration of North America, religion, hunting and fishing, natural history, women authors, and the book arts.

Acc. #07656

Biography/History: The Cathrine Curtis Corporation (CCC) was founded in June 1919 by Cathrine Curtis, a pioneer woman film producer, as a motion picture production company. In 1920 CCC was approached by Watterson R. Rothacker, president of Rothacker Film Mfg. Company about producing a motion picture based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel "The Lost World" in conjunction with Associated First National Film Corporation and its general manager, John D. Williams. CCC entered into agreement with Rothacker to produce the movie, based upon Rothacker's claim that he had exclusive rights to the book and to Willis O'Brien's dinosaur models. While viewing the movies "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" and "Along the Moonbeam Trail" in which O'Brien claimed to have done the special effects, Curtis noticed that the rights to the special effects belonged to Herbert Dawley, O'Brien's former employer. CCC sued Rothacker and Williams in 1922 for fraud, claiming that Rothacker had misrepresented his rights to the novel and to O'Brien's models; CCC also refused to continue production for fear of litigation brought on by Dawley. In the course of the suit, it was discovered that the models were stolen from Dawley by O'Brien and that Rothacker did not have the rights to the book. Rothacker and Williams settled with CCC for a release of contract and other expenses involved in planning for the production of the movie. The film was Biography/History: Nicholas Eggenhofer was born in the Upper Bavarian town of Gauting, Germany in 1897. After attending Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show, he fell in love with the American West and became one of our great Western illustrators. After his family migrated to New Jersey in 1913, the young Eggenhofer's fascination with the region continued to grow. His career spanned almost the entire twentieth century and his output was prolific. His images and paintings are sought after today by collectors and museums not only for their aesthetic quality, but for the accuracy and detail he brought to the representation of life in the Old West. "Western Story Magazine," published by Street and Smith, was the main publisher of his drawings, and his first work appeared therein in 1919. His first cover was published on April 5, 1920. He worked in that field into the 1950s, when the pulp era slowly came to an end. Nicholas was the author and illustrator of "Wagons, Mules, and Men: How the Frontier Moved West," the very collectible source book on Western transportation. Nicholas and his wife, Louise, moved to Cody, Wyoming in 1961 after spending many years working as an illustrator in New York City. They lived only a short distance from the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, bringing his childhood fascination with the American West full circle. After a short illness in 1985, Mr. Eggenhofer passed away at the local hospital in Cody.
