LAMB 300 is a three-day, intensive workshop focusing on lamb as a consumer product along with aspects to improve flock productivity and profitability. Participants in LAMB 300 will receive approximately 30-hours of hands-on instruction addressing practices that affect the consistency, quality, wholesomeness, and marketability of lamb. Regardless of the size of your operation, marketing system or your role in lamb production or marketing, the ultimate goal is to increase the consumption of lamb. Participants in LAMB 300 will learn the various aspects of delivering a high quality product to the consumer.

Washington State University has offered the 300 program since 2006 to producers, feeders, marketers, and chefs in the Pacific Northwest to increase the quality and the demand for lamb and lamb products. In 2016 WSU is partnering with Superior Farms, Oregon State University and the University of Wyoming, with funding from the American Sheep Industry Let’s Grow Program, to offer a California and Rocky Mountain LAMB 300. The California program was hosted by Superior Farms in Dixon, CA in June of 2016 and Rocky Mountain program will be hosted by the University of Wyoming November 3-5, 2016.

Who Should Attend:
- Commercial and Small Producers
- Lamb Feeders and Brokers
- Veterinarians
- Agriculture Educators
- Chefs
- Agency Representatives
- Fair & Junior Show Representatives
- Livestock Judges
- Niche Marketers

Sponsored By:

LOCATIONS:
University of Wyoming Laramie Research & Extension Center
UW Campus, Laramie, WY

November 3-5, 2016
Laramie, WY

Class size is limited, register early to hold your spot.