

Trimerotropis inconspicua

Trimerotropis inconspicua is primarily a grasshopper of the Great Basin that can be found in the deserts of southwest Wyoming. It prefers dry grassy areas with barren soil. It is common on gravelly ridges in the Great Divide Basin. Adults were found in August and early September. Although locally numerous, this grasshopper is not suspected of causing economic damage to rangelands in Wyoming.
Ref: Otte 1984, and Capinera and Sechrist 1982.