

CPNR Now Recruiting for 2021

The Collaboration Program in Natural Resources is building collaborative capacity in Wyoming and the West.

Natural resource practitioners are often called upon and sometimes required to work collaboratively in complex and contentious settings with people and groups who have a vested interest in whatever solutions are ultimately proposed and implemented.

CPNR focuses on:

- Collaborative leadership skills
- Designing, convening, and facilitating collaborative problem-solving processes
- Participating effectively in collaborative problem-solving processes

CPNR brings together 15-20 mid- and upper-level professionals for a 10-month training program that includes six in-depth sessions and a practicum project that applies collaborative expertise to a real-world situation.

The program invites participants to deepen their technical and leadership skills to address today's most complex environmental and natural resource issues and is inspired by the University of Wyoming's core values of inclusivity, multiplicity, fairness, and parity.

Graduates of the program go on to lead natural resource and environmental collaborative processes throughout Wyoming and the West.

2021–2022 Schedule (Updated January 2021)

Sessions run from noon Wednesdays to noon Fridays, with optional field trips and site visits.

- July 21–23, Lander, WY
- August 18–20, Ten Sleep, WY
- September 15–17, Saratoga, WY
- October 27–29, Casper, WY
- December 1–3, Laramie, WY
- April 13–15, 2022, Cody, WY

CPNR Tuition & Scholarships

Tuition for 2021-2022 is $1,300. CPNR covers lunch and breakfast during sessions, and lodging for Session 1. Participants are responsible for all other lodging, meals, and travel expenses. Tuition and travel scholarships are available for those who would be otherwise unable to participate. To apply for scholarship support, complete the relevant questions in the application.

To Apply

The deadline to apply for the 2020-2021 CPNR cohort is April 30, 2021. The application can be accessed at uwoyo.edu/haub/ruckelshaus-institute

Or request one by email to:

Deb Kleinman | deb@lupinecollaborative.com