LAW REVIEW CREDIT AGREEMENT

Law school policy on law review credits is that the student is to register for that credit in the semester after he/she participates. However, since third year students who are participating in law review in the spring will no longer be in law school the semester after completion, we will allow third year students participating in law review in the spring to register for the credit.

There is one proviso, however. You must actually fulfill the good-faith requirement to get credit for LAW 6950-01. If you are not able to participate due to illness, family emergency or whatever, you would have to withdraw from the course. Thus, if you are counting on this credit for your graduation requirements, you would have to take the risk that you might lose that credit in the event you were unable to participate in law review and fulfill the good-faith requirement. Upon completion, return this form to our Registrar, Veronica Jordan.
