A Note about the Typefaces (Colophon)

Avenir. This geometric sans-serif typeface was designed by Adrian Frutiger in 1987 and released in 1988. The word avenir is French for "future."

Didot. The most famous Didot typefaces were developed between 1784 and 1811 in Paris. The Code civil des Français, the French Civil Code, was printed in 1804 by one Didot brother using the Didot typeface cut and cast by the other. Besides its use in literature and law, it remains a staple of fashion and beauty (e.g. Vogue).

Californian. Because, well, who doesn't need a little Venice Beach and Fantasyland?

So...encoded in the typefaces of the graduation program are best wishes for your future in law and life and a celebration of your beauty and achievement at this auspicious moment in your life.
