Refugees, Law Students, and the Future of the Trump Administration's Travel Ban

October 6, 2017 Noon - 1:30pm, College of Law, Room 178

Michael J. Wishnie, William O. Douglas Professor of Law, Yale Law School

Professor Wishnie's teaching, scholarship, and law practice have focused on immigration, labor and employment, habeas corpus, civil rights, government transparency, and veterans law. He and his students were counsel for plaintiffs in Darweesh et al. v. Trump, the first lawsuit challenging the original travel ban (Executive Order 13769), and are now counsel for plaintiffs in Batalla Vidal v. Trump, the first lawsuit challenging the termination of DACA. As a law student, Professor Wishnie participated in litigation on behalf of Haitian refugees interdicted in international waters and detained at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station.
