

Novel 165.

A general order concerning the view of the sea written to Dominicus, glorious prefect.
(Generalis forma de prospectu maris scripta Dominico, g.p.)

Demetrius has shown us - - The view of the sea must not be obstructed by a building erected transversely, any more than by one erected directly in front. This is added by this order, which keeps the constitution of Zeno (C. 8,10,12) in force, and which interprets the novel (Nov. 63).

Note.

The foregoing Novel is fragmentary.
