The Phi Beta Kappa Society, founded in 1776, is the nation's oldest and most recognized academic honor society. Its mission is to champion education in the liberal arts and sciences, to recognize academic excellence, and to foster freedom of thought and expression.

The Visiting Scholar Program offers undergraduates the opportunity to spend time with some of America's most distinguished scholars. The purpose of the program is to contribute to the intellectual life of the institution by making possible an exchange of ideas between the Visiting Scholar and the resident faculty and students.

During the 2016-2017 academic year, the Visiting Scholars will travel to over 100 colleges and universities with chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, spending two days at each one and taking full part in the academic life of the institution. During the two-day visit, the Scholar will give a general lecture, free and open to the public, take part in class and seminar discussions, and meet informally with students and faculty.

The Visiting Scholars are invited to make visits in response to requests from the Phi Beta Kappa chapters. All arrangements are handled by the Washington office, and the Scholars’ itineraries will be worked out in accordance with requests received by April 15, 2016.

A service fee of $500, to be paid by the sponsoring chapter, the interested departments, the sheltering institution, or by all jointly, will be billed against the chapter at the beginning of the semester in which the visit takes place. The sponsoring groups will also be responsible for the costs of housing, meals, and local transportation while the Scholar is their guest.

For more information go to pbk.org.

ROLENA ADORNO, Sterling Professor of Spanish, Yale University
WILLIAM BIALEK, John Archibald Wheeler/Battelle Professor in Physics, Princeton University
BART D. EHRMAN, James A. Gray Distinguished Professor of Religious Studies, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
BARBARA J. GROSZ, Higgins Professor of Natural Sciences, Harvard University
JENNIFER L. HOCHSCHILD, Henry LaBarre Jayne Professor of Government and Professor of African and African American Studies, Harvard University
PHILIP KITCHER, John Dewey Professor of Philosophy, Columbia University
MARSHA J. LESTER, Edmund J. Kahn Distinguished Professor in Chemistry, University of Pennsylvania
NORA NARANJO MORSE, Sculptor, Poet, Espanola, New Mexico
DANIEL T. RODGERS, Henry Charles Lea Professor of History, Emeritus, Princeton University
JEREMY A. SABLOFF, Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Anthropology, Emeritus, University of Pennsylvania
DAVID F. WEIMAN, Alena Wels Hirschorn ’58 Professor of Economics, Barnard College
LAURA WEXLER, Professor of American Studies and Professor of Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, Yale University
JOHN FABIAN WITT, Allen H. Duffy Class of 1960 Professor of Law, Yale University
PATRICIA WRIGHT, Distinguished Service Professor of Anthropology, Stony Brook University
SHUHAI XIAO, Professor of Geobiology, Virginia Tech
Rolina Adorno, Yale University

Steven W. Pratt, Yale University. Adorno recently received the Modern Language Association Award for Lifetime Scholarly Achievement. He is the author of two books, the latest of which is a study of modern Jewish literature in the context of its cultural and political history. His work has been translated into several languages, and he is currently working on a new project that investigates the relationship between literature and politics in modern Germany.

Rolina Adorno, University of California, Berkeley

The Lemon Law: A Study of Class Formation in the American Academy for General Readers with an Interest in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and an Honorary Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Berkeley.

Rolina Adorno, University of California, Berkeley

Alan Lerner, Harvard University

Alan Lerner is a professor of political science at Harvard University. He is the author of several books on political theory, including on the philosophy of science and political economy. His research focuses on the role of intellectual leadership in the development of political ideas and institutions, and on the relationship between political thought and social movements. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of political leadership on the development of political institutions.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

Robert B. Bullough is a professor of linguistics at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of several books on language and communication, including on the history of language and the development of language teaching. His research focuses on the role of language in social and political processes, and on the relationship between language and identity. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of language on social and political change.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

The Lemon Law: A Study of Class Formation in the American Academy for General Readers with an Interest in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and an Honorary Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Berkeley.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

Alan Lerner, Harvard University

Alan Lerner is a professor of political science at Harvard University. He is the author of several books on political theory, including on the philosophy of science and political economy. His research focuses on the role of intellectual leadership in the development of political ideas and institutions, and on the relationship between political thought and social movements. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of political leadership on the development of political institutions.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

The Lemon Law: A Study of Class Formation in the American Academy for General Readers with an Interest in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and an Honorary Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Berkeley.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

Alan Lerner, Harvard University

Alan Lerner is a professor of political science at Harvard University. He is the author of several books on political theory, including on the philosophy of science and political economy. His research focuses on the role of intellectual leadership in the development of political ideas and institutions, and on the relationship between political thought and social movements. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of political leadership on the development of political institutions.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

The Lemon Law: A Study of Class Formation in the American Academy for General Readers with an Interest in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and an Honorary Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Berkeley.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

Alan Lerner, Harvard University

Alan Lerner is a professor of political science at Harvard University. He is the author of several books on political theory, including on the philosophy of science and political economy. His research focuses on the role of intellectual leadership in the development of political ideas and institutions, and on the relationship between political thought and social movements. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of political leadership on the development of political institutions.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

The Lemon Law: A Study of Class Formation in the American Academy for General Readers with an Interest in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and an Honorary Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Berkeley.

Robert B. Bullough, University of California, Berkeley

Alan Lerner, Harvard University

Alan Lerner is a professor of political science at Harvard University. He is the author of several books on political theory, including on the philosophy of science and political economy. His research focuses on the role of intellectual leadership in the development of political ideas and institutions, and on the relationship between political thought and social movements. He is currently working on a new project that examines the impact of political leadership on the development of political institutions.