Building the capacity of schools, districts, and state agencies to improve transition outcomes for students through a coordinated process to facilitate movement from school to post-secondary activities.

About the Secondary Transitions Network

UW ECHO in Secondary Transitions provides ongoing support for educators and state and local agencies working with students transitioning from the K-12 education systems into postsecondary education, employment and community living settings.

Who Should Attend:

Network participants could include school administrators, transition coordinators, general and special education teachers, paraeducators, case managers, school counselors, school psychologists, state agency staff, and special education service providers including OTs, PTs, SLPs, etc.

What is UW ECHO?

UW ECHO delivers virtual professional development to support community conversations around best practice in education, health, and disability services.

Benefits of UW ECHO:

- Increase the application of evidence-based practices
- Increase the self-efficacy of participants
- Participate in training and co-management of individual and district/agency concerns to improve student outcomes.
- Attend session from any location using videoconferencing technology
