ACCESSIBLE INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS (AIM)

A student with a disability may have difficulty accessing standard instructional materials, such as textbooks and workbooks, in the classroom. Accessible instructional materials are designed to provide students with print disabilities an equal opportunity to learn. The Wyoming AIM Clearinghouse works with school districts in Wyoming to provide accessible instructional materials to students with print disabilities.

DOES YOUR STUDENT NEED AIM?

A student with a print disability may have a visual impairment, physical impairment, or a reading disability, such as dyslexia, that impairs his or her ability to read and learn from standard instructional materials. These students have the ability to learn the content, but they need an alternative and accessible instructional format. Accessible instructional materials include audio, large print, digital, and braille formats.

The Wyoming AIM Clearinghouse can help school districts and educators provide students with accessible instructional materials. We are a designated state authorized user for a federally funded, national repository of accessible instructional materials. The Wyoming AIM Clearinghouse will access the repository and provide the source files to districts. The Clearinghouse can help identify resources to convert the source files into individualized formats, appropriate for student access. Call us today if you think you have a student that needs AIM!

HOW ARE AIM FORMATS REQUESTED?

School districts can contact the Wyoming AIM Clearinghouse directly to request assistance in obtaining alternative formats of instructional materials. Eligibility and request forms, as well as additional support information can be found on Wyoming's AIM website at: www.uwyo.edu/wind/nimas
