

Figure 5-30. A human embryo (about two months old) floating within the amniotic cavity.

Many inherited disorders can be diagnosed in utero by amniocentesis. Fetal cells are isolated from amniotic fluid by transabdominal aspiration and karyotyped; the technique works best about the 16th week of pregnancy.