

Figure 5-31. Fetus of a horse contained within the placenta. The allantois performs respiratory and excretory functions in horses, goats, and monotremes (it is vestigial in most mammals except that it gives rise to umbilical blood vessels).