Course Description:
This course aims to provide students with an entry point into several strains of contemporary political theory. The course begins with the early-twentieth century work of Carl Schmitt and ends with a recent volume by Martha Nussbaum. The books chosen for this course are exemplars of political theory in that they pose radical questionings and responses to contemporary political problems. Among the topics covered in this course are: critiques of liberalism, the contemporary reconstruction of liberalism; pluralism, post-modernism, feminism, and animal rights. These topics, however, are deeply engaged in understanding core concepts such as “the political”, sovereignty, agency, diversity, norms, governance, and justice. As a seminar, the success of the course will depend significantly upon student preparation and participation. It is designed, principally, to advance students’ analytical, interpretive and writing skills. By the end of the semester, this inquiry should provide students with a stronger foundation for thinking through some of the challenges of contemporary political life.

Required Readings:

If you are purchasing your books somewhere other than the UW Bookstore, please purchase the above editions.
Course Requirements:

Participation: 10%

In addition to introducing you to the substantive material, this course also seeks to improve your critical thinking skills and to develop your ability to communicate ideas and deliberate with others. This course is designed to be a discussion seminar--each student will bear a significant burden in ensuring the success of the course. Course participation includes preparation, attendance, verbal participation, and engagement.

Attendance is required—students are allowed one absence. For each following unexcused absence the student’s course grade will drop one third of a letter grade (i.e. from an A to an A-).

Writing Assignments: 40%

Analysis Papers: 30% of the course grade. Each week of substantive material students will be required to write a one-page, single-spaced analysis paper of the assigned reading. Of the eleven opportunities in the course, ten will count towards your analysis papers grade. In addition, each student will receive an optional opportunity to re-write an analysis paper. The paper should select a key concept or question from the reading, interpret it, and analyze its significance either to the work as a whole or to some specific problem of contemporary political thought or politics. While some description will be necessary, the paper should be analytical. Expectations for these papers will be very high: razor sharp, tight analysis, polished presentation. Papers are due at the beginning of each class, unless one is scheduled for “Mark-Up” (see below). No late papers will be accepted.

30 Minute Mark-Ups: 10% of the course grade. Each week we will dedicate some time strictly to the writing process. “30 Minute Mark-Ups” are a version of peer editing. Each week two or so students will post their one page papers to the course e-companion site one day in advance—by Tuesday, 3:00pm. All students will be expected to review and print the papers prior to attending class. We will then spend the first 30 minutes making recommendations to the authors regarding the writing (not the substance) of the papers. Students will be graded based upon their participation in the exercise (paper grades are separate). Failure to submit a paper for the mark-up session will result in a zero for this portion of the course grade. Student authors will then have the opportunity to re-write this paper (once) for a higher grade.

Exams: 50%

There will be two “take home” written examinations for this course. Students will be given roughly one week to complete each exam, which will ultimately look much like an extended essay. Detailed expectations and exam prompts will be distributed in the upcoming weeks.

Grading: All written assignments and exams will be graded using the following scale:

- 93-100 A
- 90-92 A-
- 87-89 B+
- 83-86 B
- 80-82 B-
- 77-79 C+
- 73-76 C
- 70-72 C-
- 67-69 D+
- 63-66 D
- 60-62 D-
- < 60 F
