RE: Environmental Engineering Program Review

As per instructions from Academic Affairs, the Environmental Engineering M.S. program has been reviewed. This program is administered by the College of Engineering & Applied Science, not an individual department. Pursuant to UW guidelines for program review, the college has elected not to review this program and recommends it be eliminated due to the lack of student demand and the loss of several key faculty members in this area over the last few years. Elimination of the program will not impact current faculty or staff strength in any way.
