Biographical Note: E. B. Mann was a writer of western fiction and an advocate for hunting and the gun industry. He wrote over twenty novels and books including such titles as "The Man from Texas", "Stampede", and "Shooting Melody". He was editor of the American Rifleman for the National Rifle Association from 1943 to 1945. He was director of the New Mexico Press (1948-1956) until he left to become editor for Guns magazine. His column for Guns, titled "The Mann Says", was a major source of pro-gun sentiment. His columns for Shooting Industry and Field and Stream espoused similar views.

Scope & Content Note: This collection contains many publications and photos relating to guns. Also art drawings and a metal printing plate.

Original Order Note: Poor, no discernible order.
