Biography/Scope and Content: Nicholas Eggenhofer was born in the Upper Bavarian town of Gauting, Germany in 1897. After attending Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show, he fell in love with the American West and became one of our great Western illustrators. After his family migrated to New Jersey in 1913, the young Eggenhofer's fascination with the region continued to grow. His career spanned almost the entire twentieth century and his output was prolific. His images and paintings are sought after today by collectors and museums not only for their aesthetic quality, but for the accuracy and detail he brought to the representation of life in the Old West. Western Story Magazine, published by Street and Smith, was the main publisher of his drawings, and his first work appeared therein in 1919. His first cover was published on April 5, 1920. He worked in that field into the 1950s, when the pulp era slowly came to an end. Nicholas was the author and illustrator of Wagons, Mules, and Men: How the Frontier Moved West, the very collectible source book on Western transportation. Nicholas and his wife, Louise, moved to Cody, Wyoming in 1961 after spending many years working as an illustrator in New York City. They lived only a short distance from the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, bringing his childhood fascination with the American West full circle. After a short illness in 1985, Mr. Eggenhofer passed away at the local hospital in Cody. This accretion contains books, court files, correspondence, scrapbooks, and photographs (1920-1976).
