

Division Code of Ethics

The Division of Communication Disorders strives to make effective communication accessible and achievable for all. Our profession benefits from individual differences among all of those involved in our field, including students, faculty, staff, clients, and families. We support these individual differences through human-centered engagement in both education and clinical practice. In service of these ethical principles, the Division of Communication Disorders embraces and is required to uphold the most current ASHA Code of Ethics, as well as standards set forth by the Council for Clinical Certification in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology (CFCC), and the Council on Academic Accreditation in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology (CAA).

If you have concerns regarding these ethical principles and/or their implementation, we encourage you to report /express your concerns through one or multiple channels below as appropriate.

- File a Division of Communication Disorders student appeal (process described here)
- Consider discussing the issue with a trusted faculty member or Division Director
- File a concern or complaint UW Student Complain Resolutions
- File your concern with the UW Report It Office
- Contact the University Office of the Ombuds for confidential guidance and support
