

Jane Goldy

Major:	Agriculture Education
Hometown:	Centennial, Colorado
Goal after College	By becoming an agriculture teacher, I hope to show many others what really goes into the food we consume, and the sacrifices it takes to do what we do.

Excerpt from Essay

Being at a high school that was so big, with so little agricultural minded kids, and then coming to Wyoming and meeting many others who showed, and all have a lot of respect and fond memories when it comes to their time in the barn has really had an impact on me.

To be entirely honest, I came to UW because my parents thought this would be the right place for me. But I am sure glad I have ended up here. Getting to talk with those who are more heavily involved in the world of agriculture has inspired me even more to continue pursuing an agricultural education degree. Getting to meet like-minded people has just inspired me even more to push down the path and see where it takes me. Truly I hope it takes me beyond the classroom after a little bit. I hope that my agricultural education journey does not stop in the classroom, and to eventually go onto get involved as a 4-H extension agent. Because for me, 4-H is really where the learning happened, hands-on and hours at a time in the barn. The hours spent in the barn teach so many valuable life lessons, including responsibility.

Being at a high school that was so big, with so little agricultural minded kids, and then coming to Wyoming and meeting many others who showed, and all have a lot of respect and fond memories when it comes to their time in the barn has really had an impact on me.