

BIOLOGICAL CONTROL

Pathogens such as fungi, bacteria, and viruses can serve as biological controls to specific insect species. This picture shows a hairy chinch bug, they can be consumed by beauveria fungi. The fungi kills the insect, producing a layer of white mold that releases spores into the environment.

IPM

