

BIOLOGICAL CONTROL

Lady beetles prey on aphids, mites, thrips, and other plant-damaging insects. Known for their voracious feeding habits, they can be released in large numbers into greenhouses and other confined environments to reduce damaging pest populations. They will not remain on plants once the food has been depleted.

IPM

