

CHEMICAL CONTROL

An inversion occurs when the air at ground level is cooler than the air above it. Common indications include the presence of dew, frost, or fog, and very little wind. The potential for vapor drift is high during a temperature inversion. Inversions typically start at dusk and begin to dissipate at sunrise.

IPM

