

HLED 5026

Achieving Rural Community Health

3 credits, open to undergraduates
online, asynchronous

Figure 1 Image source: <https://dra.gov/initiatives/promoting-a-healthy-delta/delta-community-health/>

UW Community & Public Health

This online course invites students to apply principals of community and public health in rural and frontier United States settings. The assignments build to solve a community rural/frontier community or public health issue of your choosing. The course outlines the challenges and assets that a rural or frontier setting brings to improving community health. This is designed to assist students to bridge gaps that rural settings face and create a plan for improvement within their chosen community or state.

HLED 5026 is an approved Specialization course for the UW Graduate Certificate in Community & Public Health.