

LAW REVIEW CREDIT CERTIFICATION

As of August 2024, a student participating on law review may earn credits for the following, up to the maximum number of credits specified:

- Staff Members: One academic credit per semester for staff assignments and participation, for a total of up to 4 credits.
- Student Authors: Two credits for the semester in which a student's work is published.
- Editorial Board Members: Between 4 to 6 credits during 3L year, depending on the specific position held, as detailed below.
 - Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Research Editor: Each editor is eligible for 3 credits per semester, for a total of 6 credits.
 - Article Editors: These editors are eligible for 2 credits per semester unless special circumstances arise. In the case of a special issue or symposium requiring additional effort, article editors may be granted 3 credits for that semester.

Students routinely serve in a combination of these capacities during law school.

Maximum yearly totals that may be earned if a person publishes in addition to working on law review:

Please note that these credits are subject to the College of Law's S/U credit restrictions.

- Staff—3 credits
 - Article Editor / Student Editor—5 credits
 - Editor-in-Chief / Managing Editor—7 credits
