

Book XI.
Title XXXV. (XXXIV)

Concerning the risk of those who became surety for magistrates.
(De periculo eorum qui pro magistratibus intervenerunt.)

11.35.1. Emperor Antoninus to Augustae.

The Divine Severus was, and we are, of the opinion that the surety of magistrates should be held responsible for matters in connection with the administration of the city, but not for fines imposed on the magistrates as penalty for an offense or crime.
