

Book XI.
Title XXXVIII. (XXXVII)

That the expenses of a liturgy imposed falls on all the colleagues.
(Injuncti muneris sumptus ad omnes collegas pertinere.)

11.38.1. Emperor Diocletian and Maximian to Diodorus.

Since you state, that, chosen with others, for the charge of providing transportation on the post-roads (angarium), you were deserted by your colleagues in the discharge of the duty and that you performed it alone, the loss by way of expense, if any, will, by direction of the president, be apportioned among those whose duty it was to share the work. If he learns that you, too, deserted your duty, he will not be unaware what public discipline requires.
