

Jade Enevoldsen graduated from the University of Wyoming School of Pharmacy in 2007 and has since spent 16 years working for Walmart Health and Wellness in a retail setting. Growing up in a small town in western Nebraska, he learned the importance of community and helping others. Jade met his wife of 16 years, Natalie, while studying at the University of Wyoming.

Jade's career began in Salt Lake City as a staff pharmacist for Walmart. During his 5 years as a staff pharmacist, and 2 years as Pharmacy Manager, Jade always found time and enjoyed mentoring future pharmacists from the University of Utah and Roseman University College of Pharmacy.

After starting a family, and realizing how much they missed Laramie, Jade took the opportunity to transfer back to town as Pharmacy Manager at Walmart in 2014. He is passionate about providing students with various opportunities, including a growing number of clinical services, in a fast-paced setting while establishing strong connections within the community. When Jade isn't at the pharmacy, he spends his time coaching baseball and basketball, watching his three children (Brynlee, Jaxson, and Beckett) participate in various activities, or enjoying Wyoming's fishing, hunting, golfing, camping, and snowboarding. Jade is grateful to the phenomenal staff at the UW School of Pharmacy for the opportunity to serve as a preceptor of their gifted and dedicated students and looks forward to future collaborations.
