

Figure 3-25. Compartmentalization of the seminiferous epithelium by the blood-testis barrier. Junctional complexes restrict entry of leukocytes and antibodies into the adluminal compartment, thus preventing the male from mounting an immune response against developing sperm cells. The myoid layer and basement membrane are permeable to plasma proteins.