UW Literacy Conference and Literacy Research Center and Clinic: A Continuing History of Collaboration

The University of Wyoming (UW) Fall Literacy Conference for 2021 looks a bit different as it will be held in 2021 as a virtual full day institute on September 18th of 2021. This conference has become a well-known staple to many Wyoming educators; it dates to the fall of 2009 when the first conference was held on UW campus. Yet, there is so much to this conference and its host that can be learned from its roots and its current-day ideas.

Inspire Webinar: Sharing Your Story Authentically

On July 28th, 2021, Inspire Teaching and Learning worked with Harmony SEL to bring in Nate Howard to discuss what it means to share one's story as a transformative step forward. Nate Howard is an author, storyteller, motivational speaker, and a social entrepreneur. He spoke to the audience about the organization he created called Movement BE(Brave Entrepreneur) and what it means to focus activism through education.

How to Use Technology for Additional Student Support

More educational support resources are going out there on the market than ever before and it can be important to encourage these resources for students who may be struggling with some class material. In this article, we wanted to provide some free resources that are often mentioned and have been critiqued by educators online who have seen merit in some of the ways these enrich the learning experience for students.
