

Directory of Roads Scholars 2021

The Wyoming Technology Transfer Center officially recognized the first class of Roads Scholars and Master Roads Scholars in the year 2000. Since that time, the program has grown tremendously and the Center is proud to honor the most recent class of Roads Scholars—The Class of 2021. There are now a total of 93 Master Roads Scholars and 175 Roads Scholars.

Being recognized as a Roads Scholar requires the successful completion of at least twelve (12) Wyoming Technology Transfer Center workshops. Of these, one (1) must be the Annual Safety Congress.

Recognition as a Master Roads Scholar requires the successful completion of at least twenty (20) Wyoming Technology Transfer Center workshops, including at least one (1) Annual Safety Congress.

The men and women listed in this booklet are commended for their commitment to continuing their education and improving their skills. The Roads Scholar program was instituted to reward such individuals for their dedication to excellence.

Photograph of an ox-drawn road machine in the vicinity of Plymouth, N.H., circa 1900. The four yoke of oxen attached to this four-wheel grader are indicative of the motive power needed for larger road machines. Such machines had a seat used by a driver when pulled by horses, but required men with goads when pulled by cattle; a man on the machine guided the blade in either case.
